Outline of the demonstration project

- Demonstration project to conduct "AI-based medical interviews" at private clinics in Singapore

Cooperation with local companies/governments

- Local partners:
Private clinic chain in Singapore

Targeted economic/social issues and solutions

- In Singapore, increasing chronic diseases such as high blood pressure and diabetes, and the swelling medical expenditure stemming from the growing elderly population have become problems.
- A preliminary interview by AI can collect much information about the patient required for diagnosing and is expected to improve the medical examination quality without relying on the doctor's ability. Also, by acquiring a large amount of patient information before examinations, we aim at resolving issues faced by medical institutions, such as shortening medical examination hours (reducing the burden on doctors) and waiting times (reducing the burden on patients), and reducing the risk of oversights.
